FOUR DEAD, THIRTY HURT IN OIL TANK BLAZE

HOMECOMING DAY BRINGS TOGETHER OVERFLOW CROWD

Central Methodist Has Large Congregation At Special Event

DR. IRA HAWKINS DELIVERS SERMON

Journey Of Life Is the Basis Of Discourse By the Speaker

"Homecoming Day" was celebrated Sunday morning at the Central Methodist church of Albany, with Dr. Ira P. Hawkins of Birmingham, who 26 years ago was instrumental in the building of the present structure of that church, as the principal speaker. The crowd present overtaxed the seating capacity of the auditorium and many chairs had to be placed along the aisles in an effort to seat the people.

As is his custom in a sermon, Dr. Hawkins took high ground, and in a most able and acceptable manner invited his hearers "to stand on higher ground." The preacher's subject was "Life," and his text was found in Proverbs 3-5 and 6, "Trust in the Lord with all thine heart; and lean not unto thine own understanding. In all thy ways acknowledge Him, and He shall direct thy paths."

"Life is not now the simple thing it was with our ancestors who made our present civilization possible," stated the preacher, after he had told the large congregation that he was so happy to be in his own church again, that "unless I keep the holding back straps adjusted, I am liable to 'shout' and had announced his text.

"A multiplicity of relationships make up our modern life, and those new relationships mean new duties. To Robinson Crusoe, on his lonely island with few relationships to sustain, life was a simple matter, to what it is in our populous cities. Today, the real significance of life is too often lost sight of."

In this connection the speaker said that life to preachers was apt to be a sermon, to the joker a jest, to the miser money, to the lazy rest, to the poet a song, to a soldier a battle, to the teacher a school, to the merchant a trade, to the hod-carrier a burden, to the lover, love, to one who loves his work, a long vacation, etc. Dr. Hawkins said he proposed to make life "a journey" and proved by scripture texts that life is often spoken of as a journey in the Bible and the world's peoples as "sojourners" and travelers.

"We have no abiding city," said the speaker, "but we seek a city whose builder and maker is God. We are just traveling home to God in the way our fathers trod."

Answer To His Little Niece

Dr. Hawkins told a touching child-story to illustrate where life's journey should terminate. He said he was astounded one evening as he and his little niece sat together, that she should stop suddenly and ask: "Uncle how far is heaven?" The preacher said he studied a while before attempting an answer and then told his niece that for some, the way was only a few days journey, others required ten, twenty, fifty or even a hundred years to go from earth to heaven.

"No one can tell how long we must travel. And the way has many 'cross-roads' and many turns that cause us bewilderment and wonder."

Blunders To Avoid

Dr. Hawkins said it would be a blunder to travel the roads of life most traveled, as they were those of mere pleasure and of passion and of appetite. He said those who sought the laurel crown of worldly victory, what wealth gives, what fame bestows and glory brings were in error.

"Better be entirely unknown in the world," said the preacher, "obey the injunctions of my text and stay in the narrow way than to be hailed and cheered by the multitude."

It was declared that to follow false

Crowds Enfold World Aviators

(Associated Press)

AIR MAIL FIELD, Baywood, Ill., Sept. 15—Lieutenant Lowell Smith and his around the world flying companions descended at the United States air mail field here at 12:55 p. m., completing their 294 miles from Dayton in two hours and 55 minutes. The three fliers jumped from their planes and were enfolded by the receiving party and the crowds. The fliers had great difficulty in entering the automobiles which took them on a tour of the field in order that everyone might see them. A long trail of motor cars and people afoot fell in back of the procession and stumbled and tramped their way around the old speedway race track.

As the fliers passed the speedway hospital, many of the afflicted war veterans there attempted to give them an ovation. When the cars returned to

HEAVIEST FIGHTING MARKS CHINA WAR

(Associated Press)

SHANGHAI, Sept. 15—The heaviest fighting done so far in the civil war here between rival Chinese military factions, striving for possession of Shanghai, took place yesterday and today along the Shanghai-Nanking railway line, directly west of the city.

TOKIO, Sept. 15—Disorder and unrest in the forces of General Tso Lin, stationed at Mukden, principal city of Manchuria, have resulted in a strong protest from the Japanese consul general there, according to reports received here today by the Japanese consul general there, according to reports received here today by the Japanese foreign office.

Press dispatches received here say that as a result of the situation, the Japanese consular police are held in readiness for action at Mukden and the Japanese troops may be called out to preserve order.

The Tso Lin troops are concentrated at Mukden to move south toward Peking for an attack on the forces of the central government in Chihli province.

Dissension in the forces of Tso Lin as indicated in the Tokio dispatch, would be a new factor in favor of the central government forces about to defend Peking. The underlying cause of the Mukden disturbance was not indicated.

the main hangar the fliers again were cheered and a pathway made through the crowd to the field manager's office for their interview with newspaper men.

DAYTON, O., Sept. 15—The army world fliers took off from McCook field here at 10 a. m. for Chicago, where they will remain over tonight, proceeding tomorrow for Omaha on their transcontinental flight, which will end in Seattle.

The aviators had perfect weather conditions here for their 230 miles hop to Chicago which they expect to make in little more than three hours.

The planes were thoroughly overhauled and reconditioned during the weekend stay here and the three pilots and their mechanics were in top spirits this morning after their two days rest here.

'BEAN KING' LEAVES FOR PARTS UNKNOWN

(Associated Press)

ALBION, N. Y., Sept. 15—Lewis E. Sands, wholesale bean dealer and known as "the world's bean king," has vanished like his father did years ago. As a result of his disappearance his wholesale plant and warehouses are idle. Liabilities of the company are said to exceed assets by $300,000 to $500,000.

When Henry Sands, father of Lewis, left Albion for parts unknown his wife, two sons and two daughters were left to shift for themselves. The elder Sands had eked out a living by buying small lots of beans from nearby farmers and picking them over in a small barn.

Lewis Sands was 15 years old when his father left and the burden of supporting the family fell upon him. He chose to sort beans, as his father had done. Within a few years he was an employer and had interested Wall Street capital in his business.

During the world war, Sands furnished beans for the allied armies and is said to have made more than a million dollars from these contracts.

BIG REGISTRATION AT LOCAL SCHOOLS OPENING FOR TERM

Attendance Heavy As Twin City Schools Begin Work

EXERCISES HELD DURING MORNING

Addresses Delivered By Educational Leaders

There was a great out pouring of school patrons, and students in the Twin Cities today, the occasion being the fall opening of all the public schools in the two cities.

From reports at the buildings, about 100 per cent of the school registration reported for duty, making a total of over 3,000 students to matriculate the first day.

In the several ward schools appropriate exercises were held.

The students of Central Albany heard addresses by a number of teachers, school officials and local ministers.

At the Decatur high school building, Dr. C. C. Davison led the devotional exercises. Dr. S. A. Steel, made an appropriate address after being introduced by Superintendent W. W. Benson, who presided at the exercises.

Miss Dorothy Patterson sang a solo which was greatly enjoyed.

Prof. Benson introduced the following new teachers: Mrs. A. T. Hanson, Mrs. Orin Draper, Professors O. R. Grimes and I. J. Quinn and Miss Lila Sealey.

A thoughtful address was made by F. S. Hunt, a member of the Decatur board of education in which students were urged to make the most of their school advantages.

The exercises for Central Albany were opened with prayer by Dr. W. P. Reeves, pastor of the Central Baptist church.

Superintendent R. W. Cowart of the Albany schools introduced Principal Johnson, of the Albany high school at the exercises and Mr. Johnson presided.

Among the speakers were; B. L. Malone, chairman of the Albany board of education; Representative John Patterson, a member of the board, Dr. James D. Hunter, Dr. L. F. Goodwin, Rev. A. L. Mathison and Rev. A. N. Penland. Following the address of Mr. Malone, Mrs. R. M. McGlathery sang a beautiful solo.

At no previous time, perhaps, have so many school children assembled in Albany and Decatur. The fair weather and thorough advertisement of the date of the opening had much to do with the large turn-out.

Total enrollment of the Albany schools today was 1622, against 1490 two years ago. The junior-senior high school enrollment of the Albany schools was 476.

Superintendent Benson of the Decatur schools estimated the enrollment of his schools at around 1,000.

FARM EXTENSION SERVICE OFFICERS HOLD CONFERENCE

Discussion of State's Farm Problem Is Held Monday

VALLEY AGENTS IN THE CONFERENCE

Davis Calls Attention To Necessity Of Marketing Plan

Officials of the Alabama farm extension service, most of whom have their homes at Auburn, held an enthusiastic round-table conference at the Albany-Decatur chamber of commerce building today leaving late in the afternoon for Birmingham where Tuesday they will hold a similar conference.

Among those taking part in the conference were: Prof. L. N. Duncan, director of the farm extension service; P. O. Davis, editor of the service's publications; W. D. Barton, state field service; J. T. High, district farm agent for the Tennessee Valley; J. C. Ford Morgan County farm agent; J. W. Helms, farm agent for Cullman County; S. L. Morrow, farm agent for Lawrence County; M. B. Mackey, field service man for Lawrence County; C. F. Striplan, farm agent for Madison County; John R. Witt, vice president of the Alabama farm bureau Clyde Hendrix, district director of the Alabama Cotton Association of the state farm bureau; P. P. Gilchrist, an official of the Morgan County farm bureau and other men of this section vitally interested in farming and the marketing of farm products.

J. T. High stated that while the farm extension service was primarily interested in production of good and large crops, that the service leaders knowing that unless farm products were properly marketed, farming could not be made prosperous, they were doing all within their power to cooperate with all the marketing organizations among farmers of Alabama.

The discussions proceeded along the lines of good production and profitable marketing. Those present were reminded by Editor Davis, that just at present the farmers were most interested in the sale of their cotton as the crop was almost made.

Mr. Davis encouraged his hearers to read the directions on how to farm as contained in the literature furnished by the farm extension service.

MISSOURI TRIBUTE IS PAID BY DAVIS

(Associated Press)

EASTWOOD FARM, Bunston, Mo., Sept. 15—A tribute to Missouri and her statesmen was paid here today by John W. Davis, democratic nominee for president of the United States in an address at a barbecue, opening the Missouri democratic campaign.

Mr. Davis took occasion to criticize the republican tariff law. As a result of the 1920 election, he said, a tariff law was written which was condemned by republican papers from ocean to ocean.

It was then, he said "you got your duty on wheat which you were assured would put you on equality with the manufacturer of the east: it was then you got your duty on pork and meat, whereupon these ungrateful and unresponsive commodities, instead of accepting the bounty given them by the gracious hands of the republican party, immediately fell in price and gave the whole snap away."

"And now, even such good republican authority as the candidate for vice president publicly admits that a law fixing a duty on a commodity of which we export a surplus is, in so many words, written in the sand."

The presidential nominee paid tribute to a roll of statesmen from Missouri, making especial mention of the late Champ Clark, former speaker of the house of representatives.

War Romance to End In Paris.

MRS. HORACE ALLEN

The romance which started in 1919 in France with the meeting of Horace B. Allen, New York, and the former "Kiki" Gwynne, will come to an end if Mrs. Allen can convince Paris courts she is entitled to a divorce, she admitted as she sailed to Paris from New York. The couple came to an understanding, she said, that they were not temperamentally mated. Mrs. Allen is a daughter of the late Edward Gersham Gwynne, nephew of the dowager, Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt.

MISSISSIPPI MAN KILLED BY NEGRO

(Associated Press)

TUNICA, Miss., Sept. 15—Walter E. Barbee, plantation manager and Jess Fields, negro tenant farmer, are dead; two negro women are in jail here and posses are already searching today for another negro farmer as a result of an encounter last night on the roadway near Tunica, between Barbee and the negroes, who he discovered apparently moving from a plantation operated under Barbee's supervision, in an automobile. Fields is alleged to have bought but failed to pay for.

Barbee's body was found in a roadway shortly after he started in pursuit of the negroes, to demand return of the unpaid for automobile. Discovery of his body lying between his car and the automobile in which the negroes had been riding, was made by a friend summoned by Mrs. Barbee, when she heard several shots fired in the direction her husband was travelling.

Fields body was found today in a cotton field adjoining the highway on which Barbee was shot to death. Part of Barbee's face had been torn away by a crage of buckshot. His pistol with one cartridge fired, was found a short distance from his body.

Fields' wife and the wife of Fields' companion, a negro named Bell were captured early today by a posse and placed in jail here. Bell, however, thus far, has eluded the pursuing posse.

LIGHTNING STARTS COSTLY FIRE; TOWN IN PATH OF FLAMES

55,000 Barrel Crude Oil Tank Ignited By Bolt Yesterday

FOURTH MAJOR EXPLOSION TODAY

Nine Tanks Blazing As Fire Spreads Through Wide District

(Associated Press)

MONTREY, Cal., Sept. 16—Montrey, storied old Spanish settlement and seat of the first government of California, inspiration point for noted artists and writers, today was in the path of a devastating $3,000,000 conflagration which started yesterday when a bolt of lightning stabbed a 55,000 barrel crude oil tank.

After a hectic night, during which four soldiers from the Monterey presidio were burned to death, the fire spread to eight other oil tanks in the vicinity and sent over 30 injured to hospitals suffering from burns. The soldiers were caught in the fire when the first tank caved in and sent a flame of fire and oil in the path of the fighters, who were attempting to save their property at the presidio.

Early today a fourth major explosion sent the fire into New Monterey. Danger to the town of old Monterey was seen when the run-off from the fire made a path of flame to the water's edge and threatened industrial fishing plants and wharves.

INSTITUTE HELD AT HIGH SCHOOL

The Albany-Decatur teacher's institute which closed late Saturday at the Albany high school was attended by about seventy people, mostly teachers of the Albany and Decatur public schools. The principal speaker at the institute was Prof. J. B. Hobby of Montgomery of the vocational training department of the state board of education.

Prof. Hobby spoke at length during his address, on the importance and value of the so-called "6-3-3" system for public schools, which means that students shall spend 12 years in the schools, six years in elementary grades, three years in the junior high school and three years in senior high school.

Prof. Hobby said that in the junior schools, the bent and natural ability of students for certain vocations should be ascertained as nearly as possible and that in the senior high school this work should be continued with some effort made to bring the advanced students to a decision as to what they would do in life in a vocational way. Prof. Hobby urged that all Alabama schools adopt the "6-3-3" system without delay.

Other speakers in addition to Superintendents Cowart and Benson were Prof. Ewell of the Florence Normal college, and Prof. Meadows of Albany who is a member of the faculty of the University extension department.

Industrial League Season Ends With Ellenen Shopmen Leading the Circuit

Director Arvidson of the Y. M. C. A. announced Saturday that the Industrial league season had ended, with the Louisville and Nashville Shopmen leading the circuit. Director Arvidson has been busily engaged for several days in checking all of the playing records of the league in an effort to establish the official status of the four teams. Some of the records had not been properly turned in, and he was forced to check all of his available records with newspaper files and other information bearing on the results of the game.

For a time, he stated, it appeared count had been lost of two games won by the Shopmen. Records of these games, however, were found in the files of the Daily and were accepted as evidence of the result of the contests, placing the Shopmen one full game ahead of the Daily team, which finished in second place.

The season has been pronounced a success and deep appreciation has been expressed for the part the Y. M. C. A. played in putting the baseball season over.

The White Weasel.
The ermine, or white weasel, is the smallest of the fur-bearers found in North America. The finest ermine fur comes from Russia and Siberia. In winter the animal is snow white except for a black tip on the end of the tail. In summer it turns brown, and the brown fur is, for this reason, known on the market as "summer ermine."

Large Attendance At Y Bible Class

An increased attendance was present at the Y. M. C. A. Bible class Sunday morning, when Rev. C. E. Woolridge, of Dallas, Texas, who is conducting a revival meeting here in a tent on Grant street made a strong address, based on an account of one of St. Paul's visits to Jerusalem.

The speaker recounted how fear for Paul's life at the hands of enemies of Christianity at Jerusalem caused friends to seek to defer the visit.

Paul was represented as telling his sympathetic friends, "why will ye break my heart," and as assuring them he was not only ready to complete his mission at Jerusalem, but to die there for the sake of Christ.

The business session was presided over by the class president C. W. Matthews. The music was directed by C. L. Shook, with Miss Mary Carden and W. W. Rahm accompanists.

A DAILY PRAYER.—We have looked into the worn faces and into the eyes of those for whom hope has ceased to shine, now may Thou enable us to look into Thy face of perfection.

Education alone will not make a good citizen, but alone it may make a Leopold or a Loeb.

Down right political idiocy, or disregard of the people's interest will account for it, if the Ford offer is turned down.

In addition to those known, other candidates for the presidency up to the present time are: William J. Wallace, Gilbert O. Nations, H. P. Faris and Frank T. Johns.

In one of his recent copyrighted articles Roger W. Babson says, that while the beef industry is flat of its back, so to speak, that it is destined to look up—that more beef is to be consumed and prices for beef are sure to be good in the long run.

Babson says he has more confidence in the future of the cattle industry, than in many others he could mention. He says people always have and always will eat beef and that as the country becomes more prosperous, more and more beef will be consumed. The people of the Tennessee Valley have been told more than once, that short winters and long summers here, with plenty of good grazing lands, mean success for cattle raisers in this section if they will go into the business in the right way and stay with it. According to Babson, raising cattle for beef will become profitable and certainly with so much butter being shipped into this section, money can be made from cattle raising.

Mr. Babson says the national department of agriculture has some valuable information on cattle raising and he advises that any who contemplate cattle raising, write a letter to the department and secure the advice of the department.

Mr. Babson is given to furnishing good advice, and many farmers would make no mistake if they wrote the agricultural department at Washington for literature on cattle raising.

The retirement of General John J. (Black Jack) Pershing recalls none other than pleasant memories for the great man and soldier. He is of course not as well known now, as when he led millions of American soldiers to victory, as the people have the faculty of forgetting promptly the men who do not remain active.

Many of the people of this section will remember meeting General Pershing when he visited Muscle Shoals a short time after the world war. He will be recalled as not the least bit puffed up; nor did he appear separated from "the common herd." He seemed to be just a plain human being, with rather large and strong hands when he would take the hand of a fellow citizen.

The record of Pershing is well known but the official record of the man, as stated in the order retiring him at the age of 64 will be of interest. In part that record is as follows:

"Entering the army as a commissioned officer after graduation at the United States Military Academy in 1886, he endured the hardships of the Indian campaign, then necessary for the pacification of the western frontier. In the war with Spain he participated in the Santiago campaign in Cuba. In the Philippine Islands after the acquisition by the United States it fell to his lot to assist in the suppression of the native insurrection and his remarkable success in bringing under control some of the most turbulent tribes is a matter of history.

"Becoming a general officer in 1906, he was intrusted with many important commands and when the unsettled conditions of the border of Mexico in 1916 made it necessary to send a military expedition into that country, he was selected for its command. In exercising his command, as well as in the others that had fallen to him he demonstrated his capacity for the highest military functions and his selection as the commander of the American expeditionary forces in the world war was a natural consequence.

"His conduct of that high command fully justified the selection as well as his elevation to the highest rank in our military service which was conferred upon him permanently under authority of a special act of congress, in recognition of his fulfillment of his country's expectations. The American troops under his command, by their presence, high qualities and skillful management assisted materially in the defeat of the central powers of Europe which resulted in the freedom of civilization from autocratic rule.

"He is one of the very few officers who have held the rank of general in the permanent military establishment and the one who has exercised supreme command over much the largest body of troops ever called into action by the United States government. His services to the world in the greatest conflict in which military forces have ever been engaged have been recognized through the award of the highest decorations by the governing authorities of Belgium, Great Britain, China, Czechoslovakia, France, Italy, Greece, Japan and Montenegro and Serbia.

"In his position as chief of staff since the termination of the world conflict he has been a mainstay to the executive in preparing an army of modest dimensions to be the nucleus any military force the country may be obliged to place on the field. He has taken a leading part in the development of the citizen components of the army of the United States.

"General Pershing has already received from congress the thanks of that body and of the American people, and now I extend to him anew the thanks of the nation for his eminent services and feel certain that I voice the sentiment of the entire citizenry of the republic in wishing him long life, happiness, and prosperity in the retirement he has so richly earned."

Money is abundant in the east for industrial investment in any part of the country where there is promise of good return on the investment, and eastern capital especially is partial to southern investments.

An emissary of the Rome (Ga.) Chamber of Commerce has returned from a trip to the eastern cities where he conferred with manufacturers, who are considering Rome as the probable location for manufacturing plants. This representative of Rome business interests, Mr. H. H. Shackleton, found, according to the Rome News-Tribune that money is abundant in the east and will be released as soon as the national tax policy of the next administration is determined. The News-Tribune news story says Mr. Shackleton does not think it likely that any large investments will be made until this question of national taxes is settled.

Just why capital should wait upon a future administration's policy to be determined is not explained in the news story in the Georgia paper. A number of eastern manufacturers already have secured southern locations for textile mills, and they do not appear to be worrying about what the administration's tax policy will be. Doubtless southern cities that have attractive propositions for eastern manufacturers would find the tax question a secondary one. The chief demand of capital seeking investment, and industry seeking location is to be assured of good returns on the money and effort expended.

Money is abundant in the east. This is the very general report. Money has not been as freely invested during the past few months as in the recent past previous to that period. The reason probably is that every year there is a halting of industry and of expenditures and a hesitancy on the part of manufacturers to make changes during what is commonly known as "off" seasons. Seasonal dullness has a tendency to halt both industrial activity and financial expansion. Rome and other southern towns that have attractive inducements to offer manufacturers will find that with the opening of the fall season of activity there will be little difficulty in attracting the attention of manufacturers who seriously are considering a change in location to the south.

religious leaders, would be a great blunder. In this connection the speaker said that during the world war, some had said soldiers who died in battle were in the right way, regardless of whether or not they had lived in right relations. "Unbelief" was made one of the wrong roads, along life's journey.

Dr. Hawkins said he had always stood pat on the proposition that "God is Love" and that whatever befell him along the way he had always reflected that God is good, and that he dared not allow himself to drift beyond divine care. He said some seemed to believe God left men to stagger through life, just as a mule staggered "with the blind staggers," and that some seemed to think they were on life's sea without a compass and without a rudder, but that his conception of a just God would allow no such conclusions.

How To Avoid Losing the Way

The speaker named seven safeguards against taking the wrong road as follows: "Sanctified commonsense;" "Look to the council of those who know the way;" "prayer;" "The guidance of the Holy Spirit;" "The Bible;" "Be submissive to the deliverances of the church councils;" and "Live in the presence of Christ your shepherd and guide."

As the peroration of his sermon, Dr. Hawkins, told in eloquent words the life relations of two Scotch lovers up until the young man had become a bride-groom, and had ushered his bride into the new home he had prepared in America for his immigrant bride. The preacher then quoted:

to improve the quality of stories told in barber shops.

A wise man will avoid having his picture taken while he is being kissed.

ed the words of the Master, where He said He must go away, but that He would come again and receive his faithful followers unto Himself.

The preacher urged his congregation to trust the Savior, just as the Scotch lassie had trusted her lover. The last words of the sermon were: "Heaven is the end of the way, to all who believe."

Quota Raised for Old Ministers
 Following Dr. Hawkins' sermon, the

New York Letter

By Lucy, Bureau Press

NEW YORK, Sept. 13.—The Prince of Wales is reported as desiring serious tutelage in the gentle game of poker, and so announced before he left the other side and has repeated his idea since arrival on this side. He should have no trouble. Wouldn't you know he would strike at the very chord which would make a hit with us. Folks on this side of the Atlantic can sail pennant-winning yachts lead in Marathons, breed record-breaking horses and pole ponies, outgolf the Scotch and burn up a tennis court with their speed, but if there is one thing in which we really shine, it is around that table with fascinating stacks of red white and blue at each individual's elbow. If his highness gets the system and carries it back to dear old England we may well view history in the next twenty years in light of that newest of accomplishments for him.

Little Italy, that section of New York which fringes the river on the east side from 106th to 125th, now mourns the passing of "Yap." Yap "the cannon with a heart" is dead. Vincenzo Figliora sculptor thief and humanitarian, a many sided individual, a distinctive personality, perhaps a potential Leonardo da Vinci, but with all an underworld character, is dead at the age of twenty-four. The people over there will tell you that there never was a pick-pocket more tenderly disposed to his fellow men than Yap. The artists, sculptors, shopkeepers and admitters like to recount his penchant for carving wonderful things, out of wood, clay, and even vegetables. A "pussey-cat" would come out of a broomstick for some little fellow, a monkey or a bird from a carrot or radish for some little sick youngster on the block. He could earn honest money in the little modelling studio where he was employed, but the lure of crowded places, the subways and public places, would draw him away and he would return with the "swag" only to give it, some one in need. An unfinished work which is left behind him shows amazing skill and conception. But Yap is dead, they will tell you—with a falter in the voice and tears in their eyes.

When tabby and a mouse get together, the odds are generally with tabby. But a mouse can have luck. It looked pretty dark for one on the street, the other day, which a cat had secured in its mouth and was toying with to the amusement of a large crowd. But crossing the street with it, an automobile came along and did

Brandon, Governor of the State of Alabama, do hereby give notice, direct and proclaim that at the general election in November, 1924, an election will be held for the vote of the qualified electors of the State of Alabama, and in the manner, form and places required by law, upon the following amendment to the Constitution of Alabama, viz:

The County of Walker, State of Alabama, shall have power to levy and collect a special county road tax not exceeding fifty cents on each one hundred dollars worth of taxable property in such county in addition to that now authorized or that may hereafter be authorized for public road purposes; provided, that of such tax, the time it is to continue and the purpose thereof shall have been first submitted to the vote of the qualified electors of the county, and voted for by a majority of those voting at such election. Section 2. Twenty-five per centum of all moneys derived from property lying within municipalities and arising from the tax proposed herein, shall be paid to such municipality and shall, by it, be expended for upkeep of its streets. IN WITNESS WHEREOF, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the great seal of the State to be affixed at the Capitol, in the City of Montgomery, on this, the 8th day of August, One Thousand Nine Hundred and Twenty-Four.

its worst to the cat. The pressure on its back caused its mouth to fly open, and the mouse made a hurried exit. Speeding through the maze of wheels it scampered into a sewer grating there to count itself a lucky rodent.

The theme of the younger generation is a popular one these days among the playwrights. None have treated it so royally and incisively as Edgar Selwyn and Edmund Goulding in "Dancing Mothers." The play abounds with well-rounded lines and situations which are forceful expositions of an all too neglected problem in modern society. Should our mothers become dancing mothers to convince the youngsters of today and also persistently young husbands that they have a place in life which should be needed and respected? The answer of the play is yes. And the authors have been brave enough to let the play end with sorrow and shame to the young daughter and her doughty father, while the mother dances away. The cast is flawless and numbers such artists as Mary Young, Helen Hayes, John Halliday and Henry Stephenson. Mary Young does an incredibly good bit of acting. As the mother, she is superb and real and lovely every minute—even when she is a little bit naughty in having her thing. The play is brilliantly successful.

MY HUSBAND'S LOVE

Adele Garrison's New Phase of Revelations of a Wife

Why Midge Said to Dicky "I Have Been Too Dense."

It had come at last, the clash over Mollie Fawcett's presence in the house which I had known must come ever since Dicky's arrival. I reeled in the fast-disappearing line of my outrage, made it fast, and turned to Dicky with a provocative little smile for his query as to Lillian's meaning in sending the girl to our home. "Really, I did not ask Lillian her reasons for the request she made," I answered. "But may I ask you, Dicky, what Miss Fawcett is here for? Only the name 'Mollie' was mentioned at dinner."

His face reddened and his eyes gleamed angrily at the thrust, and he promptly answered the inference which I deliberately had meant him to think I had drawn.

"I suppose you think I have been pumping the children," he snarled. "I put up a fairly protesting hand. 'My dear Dicky!' I said in a shocked voice. 'I wouldn't dream of accusing you of libelous procedure. I was only curious to know which one of them volunteered the information.'"

"Oh, of course you didn't mean anything," he said indignantly. "You never do. But that isn't the question."

"Question!" I returned in the determined voice of an excited member of a woman's club.

"I suppose you think that's funny," he snarled. "But it doesn't impress me at all. So kindly in the idealized humor. Of course I know what you're doing. You're stalling, so you won't have to explain to me about Miss Fawcett. But it won't do. You and Lil have a crust dragging that poor girl out here, where she can't help but be embarrassed and—"

Dicky interrupted Midge.

"Why?" I threw the question at him as I might have snapped the end of a whip.

He stopped short at it and stared at me and I went steadily on, so infuriated by his assumption that Mollie Fawcett's feelings were the only ones to be considered that I hardly knew what I was saying. But when I am in my wrathful mood, I am extremely quiet, and my words were slow, deliberate and icy.

THE HOME KITCHEN

Seven Fine Recipes For Fancy Breads From Many Nations

By JEANNETTE YOUNG NORTON
The Authority on Home Cooking

EVERY nation which makes a specialty of dough cookery has one or more varieties of bread, usually the kinds that are best served hot.

English Potato Cakes.

Boil and mash very fine and smooth enough potatoes to make two cupsful and add enough flour to make a stiff paste; add a heaping tablespoonful of butter, a lightly beaten egg, and a half cupful of well washed currants. Roll on a floured board several times, then cut with a large muffin cutter about a half inch thick. Dust with fine flour, and brown the cakes quickly on both sides, then split, butter and serve them very hot.

Scotch Shortbread.

Sift a small quantity of a cupful each of flour and rice flour into a mixing bowl and mix well with a half cupful of butter until evenly creamed. Add four tablespoonfuls of sugar and knead until well blended, then roll out an inch thick and cut with a large muffin cutter. Pick the centers of each with a sharp pointed fork. Place on a buttered baking tin, at lowing room for them to spread, and bake in a moderate oven.

Norwegian Krunchens.

Wash a half pound of butter free from salt and beat it to a cream. Mash the yolks of two hard boiled eggs and mix them with the beaten butter. Add two fresh eggs. Beat in a half cupful of sifted powdered sugar then add the butter, a wineglass of cordial or fruit syrup or orange flower water. Knead, then put this small mound, cakes, dip into the beaten whites of the eggs, roll in sugar, place on a greased pan and bake a delicate brown in a slow oven.

Italian Tea Biscuits.

Cream together until very light a half cupful of butter and sugar. Add the beaten yolk of an egg and two tablespoonfuls of orange juice. Sift in enough flour to make a firm, smooth dough, roll thin, cut in fancy shapes and bake.

German Tea Cookies.

Beat a cupful of butter to a cream, then add alternately a cupful of heavy cream and enough flour to make a firm dough. Knead well and let stand in a cool place overnight. Roll out thin on sugar sprinkled on the board and cut in fancy shapes. Bake a delicate brown.

Russian Tartlets.

Make a stiff dough with a cupful and a half of flour, a quarter of a pound of butter, two tablespoonfuls of powdered sugar and one egg. Roll the dough thin and fit it into buttered tartlet pans, press the dough into the scalloped edges, then fill the tarts with dried peas or beans to hold the shape while they bake. When done remove the peas or beans, slip the shells onto a plate and when cold fill with rich, heavy preserve.

Tea Scones.

Rub four ounces of butter into one cupful of flour, add a tablespoonful of sugar, a half teaspoonful of cream of tartar and a quarter of a spoonful of bicarbonate of soda. Add a beaten egg and a little cold milk to make a light dough, roll out thin on a lightly floured board, cut into small rounds with a biscuit cutter and bake on a hot griddle.

THE FALSE FLAME -- By Juanita Hamel

POOR little butterfly with her gorgeous wings spread wide, fluttering toward the flame which irresistibly attracts her by its bright promise of warmth and happiness! Little she knows of the sinister mocking being who has kindled the false brilliance of this flame to lure poor thoughtless butterflies to destruction.

But Cupid is wise. He will send his arrows flying in every direction to save one of his beautiful, beloved butterflies, and will turn her delicate wings so expectantly poised from the road to destruction into the bright, happy, love path that leads to true happiness with him her heart will adore!

WINIFRED BLACK WRITES ABOUT Secret Gardens

Copyright, 1924, by Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.

Winifred Black

WHAT do you think of when you are very tired and want to rest?

Let's see—there are the two tall poplar trees that stand on the rise of a little hill I know, far and far away.

Tall and broad and sturdy they are, and the silver leaves of them gleam in the sunshine and whisper and rustle in the wind—and when it rains, all the silver leaves clap their hands and are very glad.

And nothing seems to matter—when you sit under the tall poplar trees and think of those who lie so sweet asleep at the foot of them—no, not poverty or illness or death itself—yes, it is very peaceful there in the shadow of the great trees.

And there is a little log house way off up the coast.

It stands in a green meadow that slopes serenely to the shining sea, and there's a level little garden behind the log cabin and in that garden the peas and beans and onions and lettuce all grow in discreet, respectable rows like discreet, respectable children going to church with a discreet and respectable mother and father at the head of them.

A Glorious Garden

There are three beehives in the little garden in the green meadow and all day long the bees hum in and out, in and out—so busy in the sunshine. And in the Spring the gnarled apple tree at the back of the cabin is pink with blossoms and it is a pretty sight to watch the petals of the apple blossoms falling—falling to the green grass. And down below the old merchant of the sea, spreads his white lace upon the rocks, as a clever salesman displays his wares to an interested customer.

Yes, I like to think of the apple tree and the log cabin and the green meadow and the blue, blue sea.

Up in Maine there is an old farmhouse, weather-beaten and windswept—a great, wide, high, old, comfortable sort of place—with two gables, one on either side of the door, and each one has a gable on it the Lord's prayer.

And the woodpile at the back of the house is as neat as wax and out in the big, clean kitchen, one of the neighbor girls makes wonderful pies and biscuits, and we all put on sunbonnets some early morning and go to the far pasture for huckleberries—I love to think of the old farmhouse in Maine and all the simple, honest, and what could this something be?

LITTLE LOVER.

LITTLE LOVER: The customary and usual thing for a young man to give his fiancée is a ring. It is the sentimental token of the betrothal. He might give you some other ornament but it would not be the same as a ring. However, some people have the mistaken notion that an engagement ring must be a diamond. Any other stone, that the girl prefers, is just as proper. Why not get an emerald or a ruby, or a pearl? Or your birthstone would be very appropriate.

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

We are two girls still in our teens. We are engaged and our parents do not approve of it. These young men want us to elope and we don't feel like settling down in life for a few years. Would we do right to go out with other young men?

RED & BLACK:

You two children need a good talking to. You have no right to be engaged to men of whom your parents do not approve. Break these en-contented people who have lived there for so many simple, honest, contented years.

And in a mysterious garden that I know there is a row of flex trees—or are they yew trees?—tall, pointed, slender and so dark that they are almost black.

Refuge of Memory

Between them lies a long pool of clear water with little marble water crosses it now and then, and at the end of the long pool is a marble person, all hung with purple and pink passion vines—and no one lives in the house with the mysterious garden, and I love to go there by moonlight—in my dreams, and then I am young again and beautiful and the world is full of romance. And perhaps the next day when I awaken—

It is a fine thing to keep always somewhere in your mind a place of refuge, a little house you can remember, a quiet garden that you love. I've carried myself over a hundred unpleasant hours by locking the door of reality and wandering in the garden or sitting under the apple tree by the log house by the sea.

Where is your garden—tell me, and what is the house of your delight?

How You May Banish Some Summer Beauty-Banes

By LUCREZIA BORI

The Famous Spanish Prima Donna

LUCREZIA BORI

WITH the advent of Fall, all women seem to feel the need of a few extra beauty treatments.

The holiday days of Summer have had their due and their due care spirit. Every woman who is active and healthy and active has gone on and enjoyed the Summer activities without worrying over the wear and tear of Summer weather upon her complexion.

For when one is reveling in the water and sunlight of the beach, or enjoying the keen sport of tennis or golf, or of merely walking in the country, one cannot take time to be too solicitous about the complexion.

To be sure, the woman who is clever often puts a skin protecting lotion on her face before she goes out into the elements. She should do this if the day's outing means continued exposure of the skin, such as that encountered on a motor trip or a long walk in the sunlight.

However, the best of skin lotions do not protect the skin altogether. One is almost sure to find that the Summer season has left its marks behind, in the way of tan and freckles and minor skin blemishes.

These are not blemishes in the true sense of the word, for to my way of thinking the normal, healthy person looks better with a few marks of healthy outdoor existence upon her. She does not want to be too white and pale when her more healthy sisters are still showing a becoming shade of Summer glow.

However, the girl who has become deeply tanned or freckled about her face and neck and arms wishes to lighten these marks somewhat. They are very becoming when the garment being worn is a bathing suit or a sports costume, but not so entrancing when one dons an evening gown.

I find that the Fall season in town brings with it many young people who find their new chiffon dancing frocks not so ravishingly becoming as they would wish—because legs exposed to Summer elements has left its marks upon them.

Now the thing to do in a case like this is to apply some lotion that will banish the deeper marks of Summer exposure.

Here is an excellent lotion for freckles and tan and other discolorations of the skin:

Sour milk 1 cupful
Horse-radish 1 teaspoonful
Scrape the horse-radish into fine shreds first. Place these in the sour milk and let stand for six hours before using. Then wash the face and neck and arms in it. Repeat this once or twice daily until you see an improvement.

It is well to make the lotion fresh every day, as you do not want the milk to become too sour and disagreeable. But there is practically no effort involved, and you will find the beauty results well worth the small amount of time needed.

YOUR HEALTH

Science Now Has a Way to Conquer Scarlet Fever

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.,
United States Senator from New York,
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

FOR years I have prayed that the infectious diseases of childhood might be conquered. All the time I was Commissioner of Health of New York City, I watched with greater concern the work of the Research Laboratories than any other of the many activities of that great department. I can't help feeling that what you do for little children is of more importance than what you do for older folks.

The most dreaded of all the infectious—the "catching diseases"—is scarlet fever. The straight, uncomplicated ordinary case of scarlet fever is not so bad. But the trouble is, the miserable disease is hardly ever of that type.

The ears may become involved. Running ears, mastoid and even brain involvement are not uncommon complications. Deafness, more or less profound, may be left to hamper the young life.

Heart disease and other serious troubles are among the many sequelae to this common disease of early life. Dr. Schick of Vienna, Dr. Park and Dr. Zingher of New York, and other scientists have taught the profession how to protect the children against diphtheria. Now comes the cheering news that Dr. Geo. F. Dick and Dr. Gladys Henry Dick may have solved the problem of guarding against scarlet fever.

A short time ago at the New York State Medical Society meetings Dr. Zingher, whom I have mentioned, explained the nature of the test and told what might be expected as a result of the discovery.

"Inoculation" made through the arm, as in the Schick test," said Dr. Zingher. "If the patient is susceptible to scarlet fever, reaction is shown by the following day. The patient may then be made immune from the disease by the use of the toxin in increased quantities."

If everything turns out as anticipated, this dreadful disease will be conquered. I trust further reports will justify the high hopes raised by the preliminary announcement.

In the meantime, we must overlook the things necessary to guard the children against infection. It used to be thought a good thing to have the diseases of childhood and to get over them early in life. But now we recognize that it is better to avoid them if possible.

It is probable that the moisture and secretions of the nose and mouth carry the germs of scarlet fever. If your child can avoid contact with the throat discharges of infected children, he has every hope of avoiding the disease.

Clean hands and fastidious use of them will go far towards safety. By fastidious use, I mean that a child should be taught that it is nice to wipe his lips with his hand, or to fuss with his nose.

Contact of the hands with door-knobs, playthings, toilet articles, books and pencils may cause the germs or fingers to become contaminated.

The first rule, then, is cleanliness of the hands and face.

The surest guarantee against every disease, including scarlet fever, is vigorous health, which comes from right living and right eating.

Norma Talmadge has stolen a march on the makers of shiek photoplays by introducing the Ouled Nail dancing girl to Hollywood.

And those who have seen the fiery scenes between Joseph Schildkraut, in his Arabian role, and Norma Talmadge, as the Ouled Nail dancing girl at the Princess theater in "The Song of Love," predict that the shiek will go down to innominate oblivion when both feminine and masculine theater patrons see Norma in the sensuous dances of the mysterious Orient.

When Norma made her first appearance as an Ouled Nail dancer at the United Studios, there was such a demand to see her in her dancing costume that the director, Chester Franklin, was forced to put up three sets of excluding "flats" to keep out visiting actors and actresses.

But they got in somehow and looked through the angels of the canvas screens, climbed up on parallels, craned around corners and peeked through knot holes just the same.

SYNOPSIS

To Sir Oliver Tressilian, renowned for his exploits on the Spanish Main, comes Peter Godolphin, insulting and threatening, to forbid Oliver's marriage with his sister, Rosamund. Rosamund's guardian, Sir John Killigrew, Peter reports, is unwilling that his sword should wear a "pirate's" stain. Oliver knows the real opposition from Sir John arises from a matter of conflicting land interests; and Peter unwittingly lets out the fact that his own interests, too, are involved.

"Soho!" crowed Sir Oliver. "Now at last the sun of truth peeps forth from all this cloud of righteous indignation at my bad Tressilian blood and pirate's ways! You, too, are but a trafficker. Now see what a fool I am to have believed you sincere, and to have stood here in talk with you as with an honest man."

His voice swelled, and his lip curled in a contempt that struck the other like a blow.

"I swear I had not wasted breath with you had I known you for so mean and pitiful a fellow."

"These words—" began Master Godolphin, drawing himself up very stiffly.

"Are a deal less than your deserts," cut in the other, and he raised his voice to call—

"Nick!"

"You shall answer for them," snapped his visitor.

"I am answering now," was the stern answer. "To come here and prate to me of my dead father's hair golden, and his eyes of a deep blue. He had a very charming striking grace—for he was but in his twenty-first year—and he dressed with all the care of a court gallant.

"Has that whelp Godolphin been to visit you?" he asked as he entered.

"Aye," growled Sir Oliver. "He came to tell me some things and to hear some others in return."

"I passed him just beyond the gates, and he was deaf to my greeting. 'Tis a most cursed, insufferable pig!"

"Art a judge of men, Lal?" Sir Oliver stood up booted.

"I am for Arwenack to exchange a compliment or two with Sir John."

His tight-pressed lips and resolute air supplemented his words so well that Lionel clutched his arm.

"You're not—you're not—" "I am."

And affectionately, as if to soothe the lad's obvious alarm, he patted his brother's shoulder.

"Sir John," he explained, "talks too much. 'Tis a fault that wants correcting. I go to teach him the virtue of silence."

"There will be trouble, Oliver." "So there will—for him. If a man must be saying of me that I am a pirate, a slave-dealer, a murderer, and heaven alone knows what else, he must be ready for the consequences. But you are late, Lal. Where have you been?"

"I rode as far as Malpas." "As far as Malpas?"

Sir Oliver's eyes narrowed, as was the trick with him.

"I hear it whispered what magnet draws you thither," he said. "Be wary, boy. You go too much to Malpas."

"How?" quoth Lionel a trifle coldly.

"I mean that you are your father's son. Remember it, and strive

"Lionel clutched his arm. 'You're not—you're not—'" dissoluteness and of an ancient quarrel between him and yours, to blast of my trumped-up course of piracy and my own ways of life as a just cause why I may not wed your sister, whilst the real consideration in your mind, the real spur of your hostility, is no more than the master of some few paltry pounds a year that I hinder you from pocketing. A God's name, get you gone!"

Nick entered at that moment. "You shall hear from me again, Sir Oliver," said the other, white with anger. You shall account to me for these words."

"I do not fight with—with hucksters," flashed Sir Oliver.

"Dye dare call me that?" "Indeed, 'tis to discredit an honorable class, I confess it. Nick, the door for Master Godolphin."

CHAPTER II
ROSAMUND

Anon, after his visitor had departed, Sir Oliver grew calm again. Then being able in his calm to consider his position, he became angry anew at the very thought of the rage in which he had been, a rage which had so mastered him that he had erected additional obstacles to the already considerable ones that stood between Rosamund and himself. In full blast, his anger swung round and took Sir John Killigrew for its objective.

He belittled for Nick and his boots.

"Where is Master Lionel?" he asked when the boots had been fetched.

"He be just ridden in, Sir Oliver."

"Bid him hither."

Promptly, in answer to that summons, came Sir Oliver's half-brother—a slender lad favoring his mother, the dissolute Ralph Tressilian's second wife. He was as unlike Sir Oliver in body as in soul. He was comely in a very gentle, almost womanish way; his complexion was fair and delicate, his not to follow in his ways lest they bring you to his own end. I have just been reminded of these predictions of his by good Master Peter. Go not over often to Malpas, I say. No more."

But the arm which he flung about his younger brother's shoulders and the warmth of his embrace made resentment of his warning quite impossible.

When he was gone Lionel sat him down to dine with Nick to wait on him. He ate but little, and never addressed the old servant in the course of that brief repast. He was very pensive. In thought he followed his brother on that avenging visit of his to Arwenack. Killigrew was no babe, but a man of his hands, a soldier and a seaman. If any harm should come to Oliver—

He trembled at the thought; and then almost despite him his mind ran on to calculate the consequences to himself. His fortune would be in a very different case, he reflected. In a sort of horror, he sought to put so detestable a reflection from his mind; but it returned insistently.

All that he had he owned to his brother's bounty. That dissolute father of theirs had died as such men commonly die, leaving behind him heavily encumbered estates and many debts; the very house of Penarrow was mortgaged, and the moneys raised on it had been drunk, or gambled, or spent on one or another of Ralph Tressilian's many lights o' love.

Then Oliver had sold some little property near Melston, inherited from his mother; he had sunk the money into a venture upon the Spanish Main. He had fitted out and manned a ship, and had sailed with Hawkins upon one of those ventures, which Sir John Killigrew was perfectly entitled to account pirate raids. He had returned with enough plunder in specie and gems to disencumber the Tressilian patrimony. He had sailed again and returned still wealthier.

PLEADS GUILTY BUT JURY CAN'T DECIDE

(Associated Press)

DOTHAN, Ala., Sept. 15.—When a jury in the Houston County circuit court here reported that it was unable to write out the verdict, and get your A. Pearce to the 12 men that the negro defendant in the case had already pleaded guilty.

He said that before the case went to trial he had been informed there were men on the jury who had been influenced and declared that he had kept silent about the plea of guilty to see what the jury would do.

Judge Pearce then cast aside the verdict and proceeded to sentence the negro.

"How any 12 men," the judge emphatically said to the jury, "with reason and due respect of their citizenship and oath could have failed to reach a verdict of guilty in this case is beyond my comprehension. It should not have taken more than 15 minutes no longer than it would have taken to write out the verdict, and get your signatures, for you to have returned a verdict of guilty. It seems evident that other influence than testimony has governed the action of some one or more of you, at least."

"If there ever was a case where guilt was proven this is one of them and I want to tell you your effort and I been in vain. The negro you were trying has confessed to guilt and sentence was suspended pending your decision. I now expect to enforce the sentence."

The jury had been out 12 hours, when it reported late Friday its inability to reach a verdict in the case.

When the jury was sworn in the first of the week, Judge Pearce charged that a report had reached his ears that members of the jury had been approached by persons who had interests in some of the cases that would come up for trial during the week.

"If such a report is true," the judge said, "I want you to come to my private office and make the report."

A number of prohibition cases were on the docket but only two were allowed to go to the jury. Acquittal resulted in one case and mistrial in another.
